City Manager Proposes 2.5 Percent Tax Hike, $24.9M FY 2014 Budget

by Kathleen Gallagher

Council-watchers and readers of this newspaper will find few big surprises in the proposed Fiscal Year 2014 budget presented by City Manager Michael McLaughlin to all seven members of the city council at its March 27 meeting. The smoke signals sent up from pre-budget reports and a late February worksession (see the March 7 issue) had predicted decreased property tax yields and less revenues from the state, leaving a gap to close between income and expenditures. McLaughlin proposes to close this gap by raising the property tax rate 2.5 percent, cutting expenses and spending surplus funds. Even so, city homeowners who received reduced property assessments can expect to pay lower taxes than they did this year.

Although there are glimmers of improvement in housing values on the horizon, the city's budget situation is likely to remain difficult over the next several years because real property will not be reassessed again until 2015. Also the city has already reduced its expenditures by more than $2.2 million over the past three fiscal years, making additional cuts increasingly unattractive. McLaughlin's budget does not propose eliminating any programs, though minor reductions are proposed.

Declining Tax Base

McLaughlin opened his presentation by saying that the national recession has been the "overarching financial and budget issue since FY 2010." Local governments continue to deal with declining property values and a slowing economy that has resulted in significant tax abatements and lowered tax revenues in Greenbelt.

So far the impacts have been controlled but the city now is confronting its reassessed property values for the first time. The recent 2012 reassessment established a new total assessed value of $1.8 billion for the city, a decrease of 12 percent from the previous year. Residential property is down 25 percent (40 percent for condos and 21 percent for single family and town houses). Commercial property is down eight percent, with the surprising exception of apartment properties, which are up 11 percent. The lower overall tax base will prevail for the next three years, since the next reassessment in 2015 will not affect the city's budget until FY17.

Tax Rate Increase

The impact is that at the same tax rates as for the previous year property tax revenue will decrease $1.5 million. To mitigate this loss, McLaughlin proposes increasing the property tax rate by 2.5 percent, a two-cent increase per $100 of assessed valuation. That would narrow the gap to $1.2 million. McLaughlin explained that even with this proposed tax increase, city resident

Crowd Attends Town Hall Meeting To Hear State of GHI Cooperative

by Kathleen Gallagher

Greenbelt Homes, Inc. (GHI) held a Town Hall meeting on February 23, which drew more than 150 members for an afternoon of wonky discussion at the Volunteer Fire Department. Participants appeared to enjoy the discussion and the opportunity to visit with neighbors and friends.

The GHI board held its first town hall last year, in part to report on the state of the cooperative at the time of transition to a new general manager. Holding a more casual meeting than the annual membership meeting, which provided an open session for member questions, met the board's goal of improving member communications and making operations more transparent.

President Sue Ready gave several reports at the meeting; other board members Tokey Boswell, Frank DeBernardo, Ed James, Bill Jones, Diana McFadden, David Morse and Patricia Novinski sat at the front table. Chuck Hess was unable to attend. Staff members also made presentations and were available to field questions, including General Manager Eldon Ralph, Finance Director Joe Perry, Maintenance Director Matt Berres and Member Services Director Joan Krob.

Councilmembers at the town hall were GHI members Rodney Roberts and Konrad Herling. Mayor Judith Davis and Councilmember Emmett Jordan also attended.

FEMA Eligibility

Ready announced that GHI has learned that cooperative housing is not eligible to receive FEMA assistance following natural disasters. GHI has joined with other co-ops nationally to request an amendment to the Stafford Act to include cooperative housing. GHI has sent letters to President Obama and its federal delegation. A sample letter is available on the website for individuals to send their own letters.

The major agenda item was the 2013 Board/Staff Action Plan, focusing on the work plan for January to June. All 15 items on the work plan were covered but four projects were highlighted: the pilot program for the GHI community upgrade, the proposal for smoke-free GHI rows, a proposal by Greenbelt Development Corporation (GDC) to purchase the Strathcona Apartments and Pepco's infrastructure upgrade.

Pilot Program

The pilot project for the proposed community-wide upgrade to improve energy efficiency in GHI homes generated the most interest (see story on page 12).

Smoke-Free Rows

Ready said that in response to a petition at last year's annual meeting, the membership passed a motion to direct the board to develop a proposal for membership consideration that will allow the members of an entire row of units to prohibit smoking inside those units by revising their mutual ownership contracts (MOCs) by unanimous consent. A committee has developed MOC text, as well as handouts for members wanting to take this action, and a list of queries for legal review.

Ready stated that the GHI attorney told the board that there were no significant problems with the proposed text, including a provision that future sale of the membership requires the conditions to be continued in the MOC. She said the board expects to have this item on the May annual meeting's agenda.

Apartment Purchase

Greenbelt Development Corporation (GDC) is a subsidiary of GHI that owns and operates the Parkway Apartments. Board member Bill Jones explained that the income from Parkway helps supplement GHI member fees. In December GHI learned that Strathcona Apartments on Crescent Road are being marketed. The GDC board and the Strathcona seller are negotiating a letter of intent that might lead to a contract of sale. Jones stressed that even if the GDC board enters into a contract of sale, there

Beltway Plaza Mall Unveils New Sports Wall of Fame

by Altoria Bell Ross

A female football player, a boxer and a former University of Maryland basketball player stood tall on Saturday as they were inducted onto the Wall of Fame at Beltway Plaza Mall.

Former Greenbelter Omolara "Lara" Aribisala is a fifth-year defensive end with the D.C. Divas, the women's professional football team based at the Wayne Currie Sports and Learning Complex. She is also an avid long-distance runner.

Seeking a better education in the United States, Aribisala left Ibadan, Nigeria, in 1985, thinking she would be living with a relative. Instead, Aribisala was forced into slavery at 12, performing domestic duties for a Hyattsville family of six.

Now an advocate for children trapped in unpaid domestic labor, Aribisala, a mother of two daughters, also nurses the elderly and is vice president of the PTA. "The only limit you have in life is the one you set for yourself," said Aribisala, who could not speak English when she first arrived in the States.

Also Honored

Professional heavyweight boxer Seth "Mayhem" Mitchell, who trains in Prince George's County and is a world heavyweight championship contender, was honored. Mitchell, who holds a record of 25-1-1 with 19 knockouts, said, "I am humbled for this opportunity."

Walt "The Wizard" Williams, who said he was pleased to be presented with the recognition in the presence of his family, donated $500 to the Walt Williams Scholarship Foundation in the name of the honorees. The Foundation grants funds to Prince George's students through the University of Maryland.

Williams earned a bachelor's degree from Maryland while also playing as a forward guard. Upon graduation, the Sacramento Kings drafted Williams and he played for six teams over 11 seasons in the NBA. Williams serves as a financial advisor with the Legacy Wealth Management group for UBS Financial Services.

After the presentation, Mayor Judith Davis and the athletes cut the ribbon in front of the Wall of Fame on the west side of the mall, revealing three photographs. Janubi Devendra, director of marketing at Beltway Plaza, said teachers will be the next group of citizens honored on the wall.

Letters to the Editor

Happy Endings

Gracie our cat has been found. I need to thank all the wonderful people in Greenbelt for all the calls and support during our quest to find our beloved cat Gracie. We finally caught her on Monday evening, March 25. Considering that she has been missing since November 19 it's pretty amazing that we got her back at all. We would not have been able to get her back without the help of this wonderful community. Again, thank you all.

Women's Month Kudos

Thanks to David Lange and the staff of the Greenbelt News Review for your excellent commemoration of Women's History Month in March. The articles on women who are making such important contributions were informative and celebratory. A proud Greenbelt resident, I have served as the Coordinator of the Maryland Women's History Project since the early 1980s at the Maryland State Department of Education. This project has shared information with students and educators about the wide range of contributions by diverse Maryland historical and contemporary women. In 1985 the Maryland Women Legislators and the Maryland Commission for Women founded the Maryland Women's Hall of Fame, which has since then inducted women annually at a special ceremony in Annapolis at the Governor's house. In 2003 Greenbelter Virginia Beauchamp was one of the women inducted into the Hall of Fame for her outstanding leadership in women's history and women's rights. I was proud to be inducted this year as another representative from Greenbelt for working on women's history, gender equity in education and multicultural education.

In 2011 a new Maryland Women's Heritage Center and Museum was established and opened to honor Maryland's women and to house the Hall of Fame. It is in downtown Baltimore and is one of the first state centers of its kind in the nation. For more information about the Center stop by for a visit and check out its website at www.mdwomensheritagecenter.org. Congratulations!

Changing Times

I was surprised to see an ad in a recent News Review seeking carriers to deliver the paper in Old Greenbelt. When I was young (1950s) a position as a Cooperator/News Review carrier was a coveted honor. There was no shortage of young Greenbelters waiting for the opportunity to be selected as a carrier. It was only one evening a week and in exchange for delivering the paper door to door for an hour or so, we received $1, enough to keep a kid in movie theater tickets, comic books and yo-yo strings. I delivered the paper for a few years and as my younger brothers advanced in age, they took my place on the same route. I know times have changed in many ways but I would think that delivering the hometown newspaper would still attract applicants without advertising.

Thanks

Thanks for putting the notice of the Sunrise Service on the front page last week. I was thrilled to see it there. It even made "above the fold." We had a good crowd and it warmed up a little. Thanks, too, for a great paper.

Corrections

We slipped in allowing a discrepancy through on the time for today's free produce distribution – it is at Green Ridge House April 4 from 2:30 to 3:30 p.m. as printed in last week's What Goes On (page 1) and the city ad (page 5), not the time incorrectly given in the small item on page 6. In the Women's History Month article at the top of page 1 last week, "Greenbelt Librarian Ellen Utley Will Retire in April" incorrectly described the Black Pursuits Contest as It's Academic. Actually in 1986, Utley, an avid viewer of the television program It's Academic, originated the idea to create the Black Pursuits Contest using questions and answers from the Black Pursuits Game.

Coming Up with the Admissable

Opening Friday, April 5 at Old Greenbelt Theatre is "Admission," a comedic romantic drama. Leading the way is Tina Fey as an admissions officer at Princeton University who is in line for a major promotion. Complicating matters is a college-bound schoolboy whose presence raises the question: Could he be the son she gave up for adoption many years ago? Paul Rudd and Nat Wolff play key roles under director Paul Weitz, with the meaning of admission subject to another interpretation. PG-13. Running time: 107 minutes.

Obituaries

Benjamin P. Goldfaden

Ben Goldfaden, one of the three original city recreation directors in early Greenbelt, died March 25, 2013, in Tavares, Fla., at the age of 99. He began his career in Greenbelt in March 1939, joining Vincent Holochwost and Doris Dungan in supervising the recreational activities at the swimming pool, the tennis courts, the block softball teams and other activities for both children and adults that made the new town so unique.

Mr. Goldfaden's name is listed in the American Softball Hall of Fame and in records of the National Basketball Association (NBA). In an article in the Orlando Sentinel of March 27, 2013, reporter Stephen Hudak writes that "Ben Goldfaden was believed to be the oldest living former NBA player when he died at age 99." The article goes on to explain that Goldfaden "played two games as a 6-foot-3-inch forward for the Washington Capitols in the 1946-47 season" (photo above) of the Basketball Association of America, "which two years later was renamed the National Basketball Association." Hudak asserts that Goldfaden "gave up a pro basketball career after the league's inaugural season because he could make more money teaching junior high school."

Mr. Goldfaden was born in Newark, N.J., on September 6, 1913, and attended George Washington University in Washington, D.C., on a full basketball scholarship. He met his future wife Elizabeth ("Libby") there and the couple moved to Greenbelt, first to an apartment on Parkway, then to 3 court Ridge Road and later, in the early 1950s, to Lakeside Drive. He was the first president of the Lakeside Citizens Association. The couple's three children grew up in Greenbelt and graduated from High Point High School.

In the early 1940s Mr. Goldfaden coached the boys' basketball team, the Grizzlies, at Greenbelt High School. In the book "Greenbelt: History of a New Town," a photo on page 90 shows him with the championship team of 1941. He remained close friends with many of those Grizzlies all his life, joining in their annual picnics and coming for their funerals even after he moved to Florida in retirement.

Mr. Goldfaden served in the U.S. Navy for two years, 1944-46. He was a member of American Legion Post 136. Returning to his teaching career after the NBA stint, he taught physical education at local schools and refereed basketball and baseball before starting a new career as an insurance agent with Massachusetts Mutual Life Insurance Co.

In Greenbelt he was active in civic affairs and served on the Greenbelt City Councils of 1951-53, 1955-57, 1957-59 and 1961-63. He served on the board of directors of Prince George's Community College.

Mr. Goldfaden is survived by his children David (Gloria) of Mt. Dora, Fla., Vikki (Dennis) Emmert of Tavares and Sheri (Barry) Levin of Olney, Md., 10 grandchildren and 14 great-grandchildren. His wife of 68 years died in 2005. For the past seven years he had resided with his daughter Vikki, who said he was in good health both mentally and physically until only six months before his death from a heart ailment.

Funeral services were held on March 28 at Page-Theus Funeral Home Chapel in Leesburg, Fla., with burial at Hillcrest Memorial Gardens in Leesburg.

Mr. Mikesell was born June 24, 1916, in Idaho Falls, Idaho, the sixth of eight children of Eli Delbert Mikesell and Mildred May Short. The father drowned in the Snake River when his son was five. He grew up in Idaho Falls and Coltman before serving a Latter Day Saints (LDS) mission to the Eastern states, where he met his wife Rubye Virginia Dudley. They were married in the LDS Temple in Salt Lake City September 8, 1939, and shared life together for 66 years until her death in 2005. He was also predeceased by five sisters and two brothers.

The Mikesells lived in 49 Court Ridge Road for 50 years before moving to Blackfoot, Idaho, and raised three sons here, Keith, Wayne and Brian.

Mr. Mikesell was a bus driver for Capital Transit and the Metro. He was a certified tour guide and chauffeur for the area and the family worked part time to maintain and care for the LDS College Park Ward building.

In Memoriam

For a Local Boy’s Son, the Struggle of Life Ends

Will Ransom, my son, passed away peacefully on Saturday, March 30, 2013, after struggling with diabetes for more than 20 years and a second kidney failure after a transplant. He was 42. He was a man of many words, a writer (poems and stories) and often a facebook ranter. He railed against prejudice and unfairness in all its forms for the most part, especially racism and anti-gay hatred. But what most marked him was his immediate and fully developed sense of humor that wrapped itself quickly around almost any situation. He was lightning quick and amazingly smart (much more so than his old man I’m afraid).

Will lived his first eight years in Greenbelt, then his youth in Bladensburg. His son Dylan (19) was born in North Carolina when Will was 23, so Will moved to Statesville to help raise him. He eventually established sole custody after his relationship with Dylan’s mother ended. As Dylan says, that pretty much ended his active writing career. Will soon met another North Carolina girl, Kathy Orrell, and they were married in 2001, later moving to Wilmington, N.C. Will graduated from UNCW there at the age of 40 with dual degrees in English and sociology. He joked that he could get a cup of coffee with the degree in sociology and write about the experience with his English knowledge. Barbara and I bridged the miles between us and Will with near daily phone chats and frequent visits. He always made me laugh. I know he could find the humor now.

Kathy had two children when she met Will, Hannah (20 today) and Zac (19), whom Will immediately adopted as his own without legal process. He loved them even after the marriage ended, just as he did Dylan, completely and unconditionally until his dying breath. He loved his grandmother the late Mary A. Ransom, his parents and his sisters and brothers and aunts and uncles in his extended families. Will also loved sports, especially baseball (the Orioles), hockey (the Caps) and most of all the Terps in football and basketball. He spent most of his adult life working as a bartender and a waiter. He loved the social contact of bars and pubs, being the outgoing, friendly, gentle guy he was. He would argue with his patrons but in an engaging way that made them want to return for more.

His Facebook page is filled with tributes from those he befriended, because like his Dad, he found friendship to be something that was lived, not spoken. Last Thanksgiving, he wrote the following note about it, which included references to Elton John’s song “Mona Lisas and Mad Hatters.” He would want the last words to be for his friends and family:

“As Turkey Day approaches, I begin to think of what it is that I am thankful for – as we all do. It dawns on me that my life has been – and continues to be – a long, strange and wondrous trip. Like any good author, I have encountered some amazing characters – a number of “Mona Lisas” and more than a few “Mad Hatters.”

“I want to take this chance to tell as many of you as possible that you have all made and continue to make, an impact on my life and helped to create whoever and whatever I am. Some of you I tell this to when I can, but most I don’t tell nearly enough. I cannot thank you enough for the things you have given me and shown me, even if you thought it was nothing at the time. Please believe me when I tell you that it wasn’t nothing. You have mattered and I love you all.”

“So . . . what am I thankful for? Like the song so potently says, ‘I thank the Lord for the people I have found.’”

Construction of New IHOP May Finally Be Underway

by Jessica Suss

Since the Denny's restaurant at Greenway Center closed a couple of years ago, there has been talk about an IHOP taking its place. A sign went up on a nearby bus shelter advertising the pancake house. The IHOP sign appeared in January when they took possession of the space previously owned by Denny's. There has been no sign of flapjack life from the empty restaurant space however, until a crane turned up next to the building several weeks ago.

At the stakeholder worksession February 6, Mayor Judith Davis mentioned that the community had voiced considerable excitement about the prospect of IHOP moving in where Denny's once was at 7405 Greenbelt Road.

According to that meeting, IHOP is expected to open in May, although the crane brings questions about whether or not the entire building will be renovated or cleared in order to make room for the newcomer.

Property Manager Alisia Tyre said interior construction is planned.

"If you look at a Denny's and an IHOP the layouts are completely different," Tyre said. "They're building it to their specifications."

There is no opening date yet for the restaurant, since construction can be a lengthy process, but Tyre predicts "it should be this spring."

Linda Dreyer, director of marketing for Combined Properties, owners of Greenway, concurred and said a "soft estimate" for the opening would be in two or three months.

Like the rest of the community, Dreyer is looking forward to the restaurant's opening.

"It's a different kind of restaurant, very affordable and they have great promotions for seniors and kids," Dreyer said. "When it was a Denny's it was rather popular with the community so I can see IHOP being a welcome addition. It's just good, American food."

Green Man Starts Spring Cleaning

On Sunday, April 14 from 10 a.m. to 1 p.m. the annual 9 Lives Yard Sale will be held at Roosevelt Center.

Besides helping pay for the annual Green Man festival, the yard sale provides an opportunity for repurposing of items not being used. There will also be music and information available about the CHEARS projects.

To donate items bring them to the event between 9 and 10 a.m. Sunday or, to arrange a pick-up, call 202-664-7572.

Annual Contest

Each year the Green Man Festival selects an image and a poem about the Green Man's relationship with nature to use for posters, ads and T-shirts. This year's theme is celebrating forests and preserving wild spaces in urban areas. Entries should provide an image from trees and wild places of the Green Man as a portrait or submit a poem.

All entries will also be considered for the Green Man exhibit at the New Deal Café during the months of May and June.

property owners will see their city tax bills decrease by an average of $356 and considerably more if county and state taxes are considered.

The proposed FY14 budget includes $24,869,400 in expenditures, which is $92,200 lower than the FY13 budget and in the same range that has prevailed since FY09, demonstrating that there has been little or no growth over the past five years. As proposed, estimated revenues will be $24,708,600, which is $784,100 less than in FY13 and $160,800 less than expenditures.

McLaughlin has proposed making a one-time transfer of $200,000 from the city's General Fund Balance (surplus) account to cover the difference. It is city fiscal policy to maintain a fund balance of at least 10 percent of the annual expenditures budget. Since the account already exceeds 10 percent and is expected to be even greater by the close of FY13, McLaughlin would apply $100,000 to cover the one-time potential cost of implementing a consultant's recommendations resulting from the completion of an organizational assessment of city operation. The second $100,000 would be used to pay a portion of the city's workers compensation premium in FY14. There is a high probability that this premium will be lower in the coming years.

Staff

No staff layoffs or furloughs are proposed but McLaughlin recommends eliminating a vacant community development inspector position thereby reducing the number of city authorized employees by nearly seven since FY09. There is $275,000 proposed for a two percent cost-of-living adjustment for employees but no merit increases are funded. According to McLaughlin, this increase is less than that proposed for the state but is in line with those of neighboring jurisdictions. Staff compensation has been negatively affected for several years and an increase at this time is partly driven by a likely rise of 15 percent in health insurance premiums next year.

McLaughlin said that, as has been the case for several years, there are concerns about increasing staff workloads and justifiable needs for additional staff in all departments.

Savings Measures

The city manager noted a number of savings measures taken to balance the budget that might be revisited over the year if the financial picture improves. In addition to eliminating the vacant inspector position ($60,000), these include refinancing of the city's accrued liability ($100,000), the reduction of replacement vehicles in the Police Department from seven to five ($70,000) and delaying the payoff for the Public Works Department facility ($50,000).

State Revenues

There are some reasons for cautious rejoicing on the revenue side, including expected increased funding from the states. Police Aid, previously reduced, has been restored to $490,000, almost $90,000 higher than in FY13. Highway User Revenues (local government's share of taxes on gas, car sales and registrations) had been cut by 90 percent ($450,000) in FY10 but are estimated at $304,000 for FY14, including a one-time payment of $204,000.

McLaughlin said he was encouraged by the apparent upward trends in revenue indicators that are considered to be more sensitive to changes in the economy than property taxes. Business/corporate property taxes, which are still below FY08 levels, are up 14 percent from their lowest point. Income taxes are projected for FY13 and FY14 at their highest levels in the past decade and have shown a steady increase since their recent FY09 low. Hotel/motel taxes, which dropped to a low point in FY10, are approaching their previous highs. The increased assessments for apartment properties may also be a positive indication since they are likely the result of increased investment in the properties.

Fees & Fines

The proposed budget includes no increases in residential or commercial inspection fees, waste collection fees or Aquatic and Fitness Center pass or admission fees.

Five speed cameras were installed this year which have not come close to original projections for citations and fines. Still the revenue estimate is increased to $150,000 from the FY13 $100,000 on the expectation that increased experience in locating the cameras may detect more speeders. The number of red-light camera violations has increased with the replacement of cameras that had been temporarily removed due to the construction on Kenilworth Avenue. For both FY13 and FY14, $300,000 is budgeted for red-light camera violations, an increase of nearly 50 percent from FY11.

Council Review

The city charter requires the city manager to present the proposed budget for the upcoming fiscal year to council no later than the first regular meeting in April. Traditionally the presentation is made instead at the last meeting in March, to provide a safety net and allow enough time for council budget work sessions to take place prior to budget adoption, which is scheduled for June 3 this year.

The first budget worksession was held April 3; the worksession for final budget review will be May 20. Seven more worksessions will be held before May 20. In addition there will be public hearings on April 22 and May 28. The worksessions are open to the public and attendance is encouraged. The complete schedule can be found on the city website at greenbelt.gov under "Government," then "Meeting Schedule." The city manager's proposed budget also is available on the website.

Pilot Program Prompts Questions at Town Hall

by Kathleen Gallagher

At the Greenbelt Homes, Inc. (GHI) Town Hall meeting on February 23, it was the pilot project for the proposed community-wide energy efficiency upgrade that generated the most interest among the more than 100 members attending. General Manager Eldon Ralph addressed the funding for the pilot program for the community upgrade. He said that since 2010 the National Association of Home Builders (NAHB) Research Center has been providing energy audits and measurement instruments, as well as recommendations on energy upgrades. He estimated the NAHB assistance was worth more than $100,000. He also reported on the co-op's pursuit of grants and loans.

Board member Tokey Boswell reported on the status of the pilot program. He reminded everyone that the pilot project's goal is to make energy-efficiency improvements to 28 pilot homes and record the costs, energy savings and comfort levels reported by members. The information will be analyzed to help in deciding whether GHI should go ahead and replace existing components or upgrade when those components are scheduled for replacement. The goal is to present the analysis by 2015 because the replacement reserves schedule states that doors, windows and heating units should begin to be replaced in 2015-2016.

Boswell noted that the work has been more complicated and the bids have been higher than anticipated. The GHI Buildings Committee has learned that dividing the work into smaller components for bid benefits GHI.

So far the brick, block and frame pilot homes have received crawl space insulation and the attics of the brick and frame homes have been sealed and insulated. This summer the pilot homes are scheduled to have doors and windows replaced and the frame homes are due to receive new insulation and siding.

Phase III of the pilot in 2014 will focus on heating and possibly cooling. Noting that electric baseboard heaters are nearly maintenance-free, Boswell said the Buildings Committee and NAHB Research Center have reviewed a range of options for heating and cooling systems.

To date the pilot has cost about $120,000 for work on the 28 homes. Boswell said it is too early for the pilot to yield findings. Updates will be published on the GHI website and in GHI publications. He pointed out that the pilot project's value extends to what GHI is learning about undertaking work on the scale of a community-wide upgrade.

During the open-microphone session, two predominant questions probed the pilot project and community upgrade. Members wanted to know if they would be reimbursed for upgrades made prior to the community upgrade. Others opposed waiting until 2015 to upgrade their units if it was apparent that some actions clearly were worth taking or that some systems would be preferable over others.

Ralph told the group that the board is referring the question of whether members will be reimbursed for early upgrades to the Finance Committee. He added that members are welcome to submit their own ideas to the GHI office, which will forward them to the committee.

Boswell said both these questions are complicated. Regarding reimbursement, he noted that a driving force for doing the upgrades for the co-op as a whole is because GHI can negotiate economies of scale. He said it was clear that members wanted the board to consider having a "stopping point" for evaluation of some items and that the board would consider it. He added, however, that GHI is affordable in part because of its replacement reserve schedule. Interference with that schedule could increase costs if items are replaced that still have useful life and for which costs have not been collected.

Other members were concerned about being able to afford the upgrade for items not already on the replacement schedule. Ralph responded that GHI was looking closely at recouping investments based on energy savings. He said that "upgrades" referred to efficiencies, not luxuries, which would save members money in the long run.

would still be many steps to go through prior to a sale.

Pepco Work

GHI Maintenance Director Berres gave an update on the GHI portion of Pepco infrastructure project. He said pruning and removal of trees is nearly complete, after which Pepco will replace poles, transformers and electrical service lines. They expect to be working in GHI through the fall.

Berres said that Pepco has been cooperative in agreeing to move poles out of house yards wherever possible. He added that there may be instances where members may need to move personal property, such as plants, while work is done but that GHI will work with members to minimize disruptions.

Eventually when transformers are replaced and lines must be moved, it is possible that there will be outages of up to an hour or two while the work is done. Advance warning of outages will be given and Pepco has a list of people with medical equipment requiring power. Berres stressed that anyone with medical equipment power needs who is not already on file with the Public Service Commission or Pepco should register.

Berres added that telecommunications utilities have lines on many Pepco poles and that Pepco will move as many as it can. Where that is not possible, the pole will be cut off above the telecommunications lines and left. If the other utilities do not respond promptly to move lines, Greenbelters will see double poles for a period of time.

WSSC

Ralph covered a number of other action items. He reported on the status of negotiations between GHI and the Washington Suburban Sanitary Commission (WSSC) regarding a matter with serious financial implications. In 2008 WSSC told GHI it would replace all original galvanized water pipes for GHI's 579 brick and block homes. In 2011 WSSC proposed that the new water meters that would be installed would be moved from locations near buildings to the curbs at the end of the yards, with GHI becoming responsible for the maintenance and replacement of the pipes from curbs to buildings in the future.

This change would be a radical departure from the 1958 agreement among WSSC, GHI and the City of Greenbelt, which specified that WSSC was responsible for all the pipes. GHI's preliminary analysis showed that the co-op would have to begin putting an additional $42,000 per year into the reserve fund to pay for the next pipe replacement in 50 years. GHI told WSSC that it did not have the authority to make a unilateral change in the agreement and negotiations broke down. Ralph said the city council intervened on the impasse and WSSC has agreed to resume discussions.

Rights-of-Way

In 2010 GHI began working with the city to address issues related to encroachment of GHI houses and yards on city rights-of-way. They came to agreement on the redesignation of rights-of-way for eight GHI homes. Five additional areas have been identified and a letter has been sent to the city manager asking for a meeting.

Cell Phone Tower

According to Ralph, staff members are looking into the possible use of an area behind the GHI administration building for a cell phone tower.

Other topics reported on during the meeting included development of policy on renting GHI units, completion of the electrical ground project for GHI homes, revision of the GHI disaster plan and the acquisition of a teleconferencing system for the board room.

Questions that could not be answered at the meeting because of time constraints are now posted with replies on the GHI website with a link at ghi.coop.

Cherry pickers have been busy along Lakecrest and Lakeside Drives and adjoining cul-de-sacs for the past two months setting new poles and shifting wires from the old.
